Chapter 1 by Gizmo

It's pain I feel

Full of sorrow and hate

I don't know what to do, but I have a feeling I'm too late

It creeps up on me with a sound of delight

As if I'm not strong enough to put up a fight

The thought of them screaming and calling my name was like a gigantic slap in the face

All of this pain tears me away

From what I should be doing every single day

Protecting my siblings who rely on my ass to make sure they aren't turned into class

The people these days are crazy as can be

So I protect them(my family) and hold them close to me

As this goes on it tears me away

I am not worthy to keep them safe

I have protected many but most has failed

I can't loose another family member

Chapter 2 by Sophia Mathis

I've lost too many to count

All this misery and pain I mount

All those precious seconds I miscount

My lovely life I discount

Making my mind all the more tantamount

To stay sane in the this rotten world I blame

For all my problems came

Unbalancing my life was their aim

And they've certainly made their claim

But to them it's just a game

Longing to burn me in the flame

Life just stays the same

every day is like a fire burning me without a lighter

Chapter 4 by CAPSLOCK

What made me the one to rely on?

Why did they think I would never be gone?

I always told them not to trust me, to never believe what they see, that I'd betray them when they least expected their screams.

I would murder their hopes and slaughter their dreams.

That it would happen because betrayal is not for me in any way a conscious thought.

For me, it is second nature, like jumping back from the hot stove when it burns.
